'UNCONSTITUTIONAL': Gay marriage ban lifted

Love wins. A federal court judge ruled that Pennsylvania's same-sex marriage ban has been struck down.

When Noelle Foizen woke up Tuesday morning, she said she didn't know she and her partner would be applying for a marriage license.

But around 3:45 p.m., Foizen and Carolyn M. Caton got one. And after the mandatory three-day waiting period, the couple of 13 years will officially marry.

"It was so surreal," Foizen said of the moment she found out that a federal judge struck down Pennsylvania's gay marriage ban. She left work early, picked up her partner and headed down to City Hall.

"I was hopeful but guarded because … it's Pennsylvania," the Philadelphia woman said with a laugh. "But it was just amazing. We had been talking about getting married. But we definitely didn't wake up today thinking we'd get our marriage license."

Foizen and Caton, standing closely together, joined hundreds of other gay rights supporters in Center City late Tuesday afternoon celebrating what all there called a "victory."

Happy tears, congratulatory hugs and chants echoed throughout the north side of City Hall.

A landmark decision

U.S. District Court Judge John Jones III compared Pennsylvania's ban on same-sex marriage to school segregation laws overturned by the U.S. Supreme Court's 1954 landmark Brown vs. Board of Education decision.

- "We are a better people than what these laws represent, and it is time to discard them into the ash heap of history," he wrote.

Quoted

"I just can't believe it. It's real. And we're here."

The American Civil Liberties Union of Pennsylvania hosted the rally after U.S. District Court Judge John Jones III ruled that Pennsylvania's 1996 Defense of Marriage Act was unconstitutional. The opinion came down less than a year after a federal lawsuit had been filed last July on behalf of 21 Pennsylvanians who want to marry or want the commonwealth to recognize their out-of-state marriages.

"By virtue of this ruling, same-sex couples who seek to marry in Pennsylvania may do so, and already married same-sex couples will be recognized as such in the Commonwealth," Jones said.

Pennsylvania now becomes the 19th state where gay marriage is allowed.

Rue Landau, the executive director of the Philadelphia Commission on Human Relations, and her partner Kerry Smith, who are parents of a six-year-old, were the first in Pennsylvania to get their marriage license. They will also be the first to officially marry in Philadelphia.

The office in City Hall that manages marriage licenses announced extended hours. It will be open today from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Not all celebrated

The National Organization for Marriage, which argues marriage is the union of a man and a woman, called the ruling "brazen and unjust."

Philadelphia Archbishop Charles J. Chaput in a statement said that "marriage is more than a private arrangement between two people."

He called the court decision "a mistake with long-term, negative consequences."

The state has 30 days to decide whether to appeal.

Philly locals join McD's wage protests

$15 and a union. A local worker and pastor will protest the national shareholders meeting.

'Poverty' wages

Pastor Larry Patrick said that McDonald's barely pays its workers enough to live.

- "It's not a matter of asking for a raise," Patrick said. "The numbers speak for themselves. ... You'll find that people who are not making $10.88 an hour are actually below the poverty line."
- Watson said he gets paid for 30 hours, even when he works more.

Two men from Philadelphia will join McDonald's employees and their supporters at protests Thursday at the fast-food burger chain's annual shareholders meeting in Chicago.

Asked what he'll be fighting for there, McDonald's employee Justin Watson's answer was simple: "$15 and a union."

Joined by Pastor Larry Patrick of Redeem Baptist Church in Strawberry Mansion, Watson, 29, of Logan, said while waiting in the airport for his flight to Chicago on Tuesday afternoon that McDonald's has reduced his hours — and he had to get a second job as a dishwasher at a different restaurant just to make ends meet.

"I'm trying to set the record straight for my kids so they wont have to be in the same kind of predicament I am," said Watson, who has worked at McDonald's since March 2012 in a variety of positions.

Quoted

"I enjoy what I do, but I'm disgruntled. We all know what the situation is. It's all about the money." Watson

Pastor Patrick, who is attending the protests in support, said that McDonald's itself would benefit from increasing the wages of its workers.

"My message would be that in an industry that is as successful as McDonald's, we all know that a basic business practice is happier employees make for better companies," Patrick said. "McDonald's can be a leader not only in fast food, but a leader in how employee and employer relationships can work favorably."

McDonald's said in April that sales fell 1.7 percent and its net income fell 5 percent. Meanwhile, employees in New York, Michigan and California have filed labor lawsuits against their employers for allegedly not paying full overtime and asking them to pay additional time off the clock.

The shareholders meeting is closed to the press and the public.

Daytime DUI. Man charged in fatal N. Philadelphia crash

Ronald Manson / PPD

Police arrested and charged a suspect in connection with a drunken driving accident that killed a man on Girard Avenue on Monday afternoon.

Driver Ronald Manson, 64, of the 900 block of New Market Street in Northern Liberties, is in custody facing charges of involuntary manslaughter, homicide by vehicle, homicide by vehicle while DUI and other related offenses.

Stuart Moore, 54, of the 1300 block of North 10th Street, was killed in the daytime crash on the 800 block of W. Girard Avenue, outside Girard Beer Distributor, where he reportedly was working at the time.

Manson was driving a white 1995 Chevrolet 1500 van eastbound on Girard Avenue when he veered into the running lane, police said.

At that time, Moore was in the running lane directing a co-worker backing up a delivery truck when he was struck by Manson's vehicle.

Moore was pronounced dead at the scene at 1:50 p.m., according to police reports.

Manson did not leave the scene of the accident, police said. He is being held on $350,000 bail and will appear in court on June 4.

Family members and friends described Moore to 6-ABC as a hardworking man who lost his wife 20 years ago and raised their son alone.

Moore's employer at the beer distributor, where he had worked for the past eight months, described him as a valued employee.

Mistrial. Trouble with jury sinks 'mob' trial

A mistrial was declared at the trial of Anthony Nicodemo, 42, charged with murder for the death of Gino DiPietro, the district attorney's office announced on Tuesday.

Judge Jeffrey Minehart declared a mistrial after the number of jurors was reduced to 11, below the minimum of 12, reports say.

Nicodemo will face retrial, prosecutors said.

DiPietro's murder took place on the 2800 block of Iseminger Street around 3 p.m. on Thursday, Dec. 12, 2012.

Reports say DiPietro was targeted because he served as a federal informant on his cousin Victor DiPietro.

But prosecutors said during opening statements for this trial that the motive for the murder was unknown. No reference to Nicodemo's alleged ties to organized crime was made during trial.

Jury troubles

A typical trial has 12 jurors and two alternates.

- This trial began last week. One juror left on the second day after reportedly reading media coverage of the case.
- On Tuesday, two more jurors simply did not appear in court.

They argued that Nicodemo is guilty of murder for serving as a getaway driver. The gun used in the slaying was found in his vehicle after he was arrested.

But Nicodemo's lawyer argued that the shooter leapt into Nicodemo's car, held him hostage for a few minutes then left the gun in the car and fled.

The shooter has not been charged.

Cash 5 hits for $800K in East Germantown

A Pennsylvania Lottery Cash 5 lottery ticket that hit for a $800,000 jackpot on Monday was sold in East Germantown, lottery officials said.

The 7-Eleven at 1034 Washington Ave. sold the winning ticket. The store will receive a $5,000 bonus, according to a news release.

The ticket correctly matched all five balls — 03-09-17-42-43 — to win the prize.

The federal government withholds 25 percent of the winnings.

Lottery officials said the ticket holders have one year from the drawing date to claim the winnings.

Before the winner can be identified, the prize money must first be claimed and the ticket validated. METRO

Cyber-spying. China confronts US envoy over accusations

A tense stand-off between the United States and China over state-backed cyber espionage has dragged China's secretive hacking unit "61398" back into focus, after the military group was pinpointed last year for mounting cyber attacks on Western commercial targets.

U.S. authorities on Monday charged five Chinese military officers at the unit, accusing them of hacking into American nuclear, metal and solar firms to steal trade secrets. China on Tuesday summoned the U.S. ambassador in Beijing and warned it would retaliate if Washington followed through with the charges. It said the affair would damage "mutual trust." REUTERS

The House of Representatives will vote this week on a bill that will make it easier for the Department of Veterans Affairs to fire or demote senior executives, officials said Tuesday, following allegations veterans' health care delays have led to preventable deaths.

The bill addressing the "mess at the Veterans Administration" will "try and provide the tools to the administration to hold senior managers accountable," House Majority Leader Eric Cantor, a Republican, told reporters.

"The American people are frustrated, especially when those who have served our country in uniform have been treated the way they have and God forbid, who have perished because of the mess at the VA," Cantor said at a news conference.

Eric Shinseki, secretary of the department, has faced calls for his resignation over the allegations, but so far President Barack Obama has resisted the demands and assigned a top White House aide to help the department deal with the problem. REUTERS

Court. Woman arrested on suspicion of forcing 3-year-old girl to eat feces

An Arizona woman was arrested over the weekend on suspicion of forcing a 3-year-old girl to eat her own feces after the girl defecated in a bathtub, court records show.

Nicole Candelaria, 28, was arrested Saturday and booked on suspicion of child abuse after the girl — her boyfriend's daughter — reported the incident to the girl's mother, according to police.

The child, along with her two siblings, ages 5 and 3, had spent six days with their father before returning to the mother on Friday. Candelaria watched the children while the father was at work, according to police.

The girl told authorities that Candelaria became enraged after her accident, made her eat the feces and forcibly held the girl on a toilet, police said. The child's allegations were corroborated by her siblings.

A forensic medical exam showed bruising consistent with being held on the toilet, police said.

Candelaria denied the allegations and countered that the girl is a frequent liar, the statement said. REUTERS

McDonald's 'Happy' new mascot taking heat in social media

McDonald's restaurant says its new "Happy" mascot will bring "fun and excitement" to its children's meals, but social media contend the toothy, red box-shaped character will have the opposite effect.

Twitter responses to McDonald's mascot announcement on Monday complain that the animated red Happy Meal box is scary and will give children nightmares.

"It's the meal that eats you," said one comment. Another said, "I didn't want to sleep tonight anyways, it's cool."

McDonald's said in a statement that it will encourage kids to enjoy healthy food choices.

In response to social media criticism, a McDonald's spokeswoman noted that since 2009, the character has been "loved and well-received by children and families in Latin America and Europe."

Canine killed. US postal worker investigated in death of small dog

The U.S. Postal Service is investigating a report that a mail carrier in Texas fatally injured a 10-pound Yorkshire Terrier that he said attacked him by hitting the animal in the head with a rock, a spokeswoman said on Tuesday.

The 5-year-old dog, named Maxwell, suffered a shattered skull and severe spinal-cord injuries and had to be euthanized, the dog's owner, Lawrence Brown told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram.

Brown told the paper the dog left his yard and wandered across the street to where the postal worker was delivering mail. Brown said he was working in his garage, heard a commotion and then a dog whimpering in pain.

He confronted the postman, who told Brown that he had struck the dog with a rock.

The postal service has not released the name of the mail carrier.

"The postal service takes the issue of dog bite prevention very seriously," Fort Worth postal service spokeswoman Arlene Sanchez said in an email. "We are saddened at the loss of the customer's pet."

Study: E-cigs boost success in quit efforts

Smokers trying to quit are 60 percent more likely to report success if they switch to e-cigarettes than if they use nicotine products such as patches or gum, or even just willpower, scientists said on Tuesday.

Presenting findings from a study of almost 6,000 smokers over five years, the researchers said the results suggest e-cigarettes could play an important role in reducing smoking rates and hence cutting tobacco-related deaths and illnesses.

As well as causing lung cancer and other chronic respiratory diseases, tobacco smoking is also a major contributor to cardiovascular diseases, the world's No. 1 killer. The results were adjusted for a range of factors that might influence success at quitting. REUTERS

Study to investigate how cell phones affect teenage brains

New angle. Previous studies have focused on adults, brain cancer.

British researchers are launching the largest study in the world to investigate whether using cell phones and other wireless gadgets might affect children's brain development.

The Study of Cognition, Adolescents and Mobile Phones, or SCAMP, project will focus on cognitive functions such as memory and attention, which continue to develop into adolescence.

Although to date, there is no convincing evidence that radio waves from phones affect health, most research has focused on adults and the potential risk of brain cancers.

Because of that, scientists are uncertain as to whether children's developing brains may be more vulnerable than adults' brains — partly because their nervous systems are still developing, and partly because they are likely to have a higher exposure over their lifetimes.

"Scientific evidence available to date is reassuring and shows no association between exposure to radiofrequency waves from mobile phone use and brain cancer in adults in the short term — i.e., less than 10 years of use," said Paul Elliott, director of the Centre for Environment and Health. The World Health Organization estimates that there are 4.6 billion cell phone subscriptions globally.

Cognitive abilities

The investigators aim to recruit around 2,500 11- to 12-year-old school children and follow their cognitive development over two years while collecting data on how often, for what and for how long they use mobile or smart phones and other wireless devices.

- Parents and pupils who agree to take part in the study will answer questions about the children's use of mobile devices and wireless technologies, well-being and lifestyle. Pupils will also undertake classroom-based computerized tests of the cognitive abilities behind functions such as memory and attention.

Help. Nigeria asks UN al Qaeda committee to blacklist Boko Haram

Nigeria has formally asked the U.N. Security Council al Qaeda sanctions committee to blacklist the Islamist militant group Boko Haram after the kidnapping of hundreds of schoolgirls, according to a confidential document obtained by Reuters.

If there is no objection by the 15-member council committee, which operates by consensus, Boko Haram will be sanctioned as of 3:00 p.m. on Thursday. The sanctions would include an international asset freeze, travel ban and arms embargo.

Until recently, Nigeria had been reluctant to seek international assistance to combat Boko Haram. REUTERS

Thai army chief urges rivals to talk

Thailand's army declared martial law nationwide on Tuesday to restore order after six months of street protests that have left the country without a proper functioning government, but insisted the surprise intervention was not a military coup.

While troops patrolled parts of Bangkok and army spokesmen took to the airwaves, the caretaker government led by supporters of self-exiled former premier Thaksin Shinawatra said it was still running the country. REUTERS

Court sends Pistorius for 30 days of mental tests

Prison. He could face a life sentence if he is found guilty of murdering Reeva Steenkamp.

South African Olympic and Paralympic track star Oscar Pistorius was ordered on Tuesday to undergo a month of psychiatric tests to find out whether he was criminally responsible when he shot dead his girlfriend on Valentine's Day last year.

Judge Thokozile Masipa told Pistorius he must report to Pretoria's Weskoppies hospital, one of South Africa's top mental institutions, as an outpatient for up to 30 days, starting on May 26.

The evaluation would determine "whether the accused by reason of mental illness or mental defect was at the time of the commission of the offense criminally responsible for the offense he is charged and whether he was capable of appreciating the wrongfulness of his act."

Pistorius, dressed in a black suit and tie, stood somberly in the dock as Masipa read out the order before postponing the case to June 30.

Pistorius denies killing Steenkamp in cold blood after an argument, as suggested by prosecutors, and insists he shot four times at the bathroom door she was behind in self defense against what he thought was an intruder. REUTERS

Today, Rob Kardashian knows what you're saying about him, Conan O'Brien has an idea for a new "Jurassic Park" movie and Lena Dunham shares a sweet story about orthopedic shoes.

@robkardashian: I'm aware that I'm fat that def aint a surprise to me lol and my only therapy will be in the gym anyways had to say somethinggggggggg

@ConanOBrien: The next Jurassic Park movie should take place on an island where they've revived a working Blockbuster Video.

@lenadunham: Watched 2 older women trying on orthopedic shoes. Woman #1: "your feet look so small!" Woman #2: "but do they look TOO small, is it WEIRD!?"

Ryan Gosling keeps getting better

Can Ryan Gosling ever disappoint? Not with his looks! This guy is just like one of those fancy wines that keep getting better with age. We can't wait to see him at 50! And don't even get us started on 70. He attended the photo call in Cannes for his directorial debut, "Lost River," but while this "I'm running my hands casually through my hair" pose didn't let us down, we hear that the critics didn't like the movie. Wah, wah, wah! We'll watch it anyway.

Channing Tatum is a 'high-functioning alcoholic'

We can never get enough of Channing Tatum, so it's nice to see the gorgeous actor on the cover of GQ's June issue (and in five movies this year too — hard working, much?). In the mag, he has some interesting news to share though. Apparently the actor sees himself as a "high-functioning alcoholic." Here's what the 34-year-old actor shared: "I probably drink too much, you know. My wife, that's what she bought into. … I'm probably a pretty high-functioning, I guess, you know, I would say, alcoholic, I guess." We get it, we like to drink too, Channing, but please promise us you won't go all Lindsay Lohan on us. You are too precious!

Speaking of Lindsay Lohan ...

We've seen her sex list, we've heard endless tales about her sobriety and we've seen her boobs a couple of times already. The "I am definitely sober even though I act drunk all the time" star shared yet another boob selfie on Instagram with the caption: "#isCANNESQuicheENUF?! #ily @mannyuk." We have no idea what the clearly sober Lohan is talking about. And it's an even bigger mystery to us why she's in Cannes. It's not like she has anything to promote, right? Maybe she's just promoting her special friendship with this Manny dude she's pictured with.

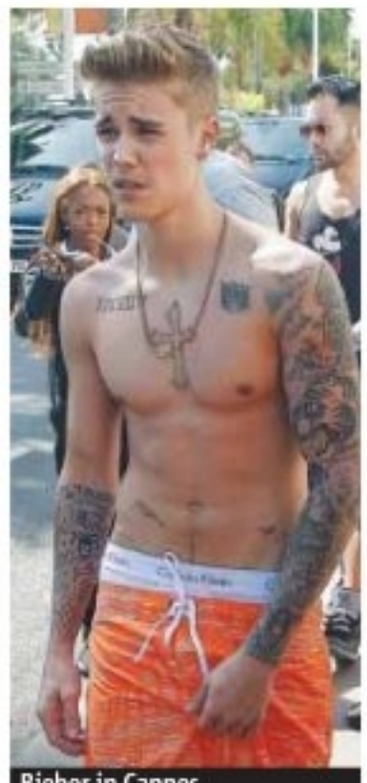
1 What's the deal with Paris Hilton and Justin Bieber?



Bieber in Cannes
ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

Paris Hilton, 33, and Justin Bieber, 20, were seen partying together in Cannes over the weekend at Busta Rhymes' birthday bash. That's not that weird, as both of them like to party hard. The weird thing is that the two were seen leaving the club together. This is unfortunately the end of the story, but a few guesses don't hurt. Maybe Paris just wanted to get some vocal advice from Justin? (She sure does need it, right?) Maybe they just stopped by McDonald's to get burgers? Your guess is as good as ours.

QUESTLOVE IS ON FIRE AND THE GEATOR IS STILL GOING STRONG

Your schedule may be packed, but not like Questlove's. Along with The Roots' new album this week ("... And Then You Shoot Your Cousin"), May 31's Roots Picnic at Festival Pier and the Fourth of July Wawa Welcome America! extravaganza on the Parkway, Quest is DJ-ing the after-party for Marc Vetri's Alex's Lemonade Stand Great Chefs Event at the Navy Yard on June 10. Now, he's quietly announced he'll executive produce VH1's "Soundclash" starting July 23 with weekly host Diplo (you may know him as a DJ, a former Philadelphian or Katy Perry's beau) and guests including Ed Sheeran and Lil Wayne.

When Eagles linebacker Connor Barwin hit I-House's "Global Gala: Colors of Brazil" bash Saturday, there was buzz about a big announcement coming from his camp. Barwin delivered, claiming June 20 at Union Transfer for his Make the World Better Foundation concert starring Philly's Kurt Vile and benefiting Ralph Brooks Park in Point Breeze.

Local radio legend Jerry Blavat took Philadelphia's Low Cut Connie and its frontman Adam Weiner under his wing after hearing the rockabilly band's "Call Me Sylvia" and booked them into the Kimmel last January. Label shopping until recently (Weiner says they're signed, with a Winter 2015 release date), Low Cut Connie recorded Blavat's rapid-fire patter for their next album, which features saxophonist Lou Capozzoli from Ray's Happy Birthday Bar in South Philly.

Seen on the scene

- Her Wells Fargo Center concert received critical lumps, but at least Lady Gaga got love from her beau, "Chicago Fire"'s Taylor Kinney, who attended last week's gig.
- Historic Philadelphia Inc.'s "An Evening in Franklin Square" last Thursday featured a horse "race" on the carousel and dinner by Brulee Catering. With Beasley Reece auctioneering, Ed Rendell put himself up for bid — not once, but twice — as a City Tavern dinner date. Historic Philadelphia raised over $240,000.
- Actress/faux hair entrepreneur Vivica A. Fox welcomed pals and associates to dine at Ruth's Chris Steak House last Friday. She wasn't just looking to eat, she was in town shooting catalogs for her eponymously named hair collection at the Power Plant on N. Second St.

BEHOLD! HERE ARE TWO CHARLES XAVIERS IN ONE PLACE.
GETTY IMAGES

When Professor X met Professor X

Nerdgasm. Patrick Stewart and James McAvoy talk about playing each other in the new "X-Men."

"X-Men: Days of Future Past" allows for a rare occurrence, not only in the comics franchise but in movies in general. It's a time-travel picture, with the older mutants sending Hugh Jackman's Wolverine back to 1973 to thwart a dystopian future with mutant-killing robots. That means we get to see both the old and young versions of the same character, namely Professor Charles Xavier (Patrick Stewart and James McAvoy, respectively), as well as two Magnetos (Ian McKellen and Michael Fassbender).

Most don't share any scenes, although Stewart and McAvoy do once, when both characters meet up for a little nerd-electrifying pow-wow.

"It was James' first day of work and it was my last day of work," recalls Stewart of shooting the scene. "My bags were packed, and I was ready to get out of Dodge." He says they didn't belabor the scene.

"I don't recall rehearsing it. We knew the lines and they rolled the cameras; it was four minutes' work. I shouldn't have said that — I should have said we worked on it for weeks," he says.

McAvoy obviously had much to draw on for his performance.

"I've been a fan [of Stewart's] for years," McAvoy says. "I watched the empathy that pours out of him in his previous movies. ... It's the prime characteristic of Professor X."

He wasn't the only one studying another actor's performance. Stewart studied McAvoy as well. "It made me want to go back and shoot it again, now that I knew where I came from. I could get so much more James McAvoy into that performance," he says, somewhat jokingly.

At the same time, Charles Xavier is in a very different spot than he has been in any other movie.

"Our enemy this time is not available for rational conversation or to be reasoned with," says Stewart. "The Professor has to make the decision to destroy something to survive. It toughens Xavier up."

MICHAEL FASSBENDER RETURNS AS THE YOUNGER IAN MCKELLEN.
ALAN MARKFIELD

Solo Magneto

Tragically, Ian McKellen could not attend the press junket in New York, which would have reunited him with his dear friend and funny picture buddy, Stewart. That also meant that the two Magnetos couldn't butt heads. In fact, McKellen and Fassbender didn't even see each other on the set.

"We sort of kept missing each other," Fassbender recalls. That doesn't mean he wasn't studying his work, however. "For this one I spent a lot of time with this video on YouTube, which was Ian McKellen in the 1970s doing this workshop on 'Macbeth.' I was playing that over and over again."

The Weekly yelp

Long gone are the days when fried chicken comes only in a bucket. It can be dressed up, paired with other battered goodies, given an ethnic spin and, yes, even served vegan. There's no wrong way to have that chicken, and this week, we show you why.

Give your lawn a makeover

See more at www.metro.us

DIY. No need to call in the pros. Here's how to spruce up your yard yourself.

JULIA WEST
@MetroPhilly
letters@metro.us

A little elbow grease can turn weedy patches into a lush lawn. / THINKSTOCK

Is your lawn looking less than picture-perfect after a long, harsh winter? Don't let that sad soil or monstrous weed patch overwhelm you. Whipping your yard into shape isn't as tough as you think. We spoke with Marty Levin, owner of Passionate About Landscaping (PassionateAboutLandscaping.com) for tips on how to improve your outdoor space yourself.

Create a blank canvas

It's not the most exciting part of the job, but a thorough cleanup to create a blank canvas of yard is a must. "Before any planting, the beds should be cleaned up of all issues," Levin says. "You'll probably have to trim some trees because we had a bad winter. There are a lot of loose limbs, so take down everything that is a possible widow-maker."

Invite the birds

One way to create an eye-catching lawn is to incorporate several textures. "To enhance a garden inexpensively, add some hardscape, such as a boulder or birdbath. Small stones that create a path also work. These give a bit of architecture to the garden and really set it off nicely," says Levin.

Don't tackle the patio

Outdoor improvements you do yourself can save money and instill a sense of pride. But sometimes a job requires the tools and know-how of the pros.

"A lot of people try to take on patios by themselves, for example," Levin says. "Most people just don't have the right equipment for something like that, so we end up doing a lot of patio redos for folks."

Quoted

"Before any planting, the beds should be cleaned up of all issues. You'll probably have to trim some trees because we had a bad winter." Marty Levin

Tip

Plant once, plant right

In the case of planting, one-and-done is preferable. "I'm not a believer in annual flowers," Levin explains. "They last for one season and they die. I prefer perennials, which come back each year." He points out that many perennials, such as moonbeam coreopsis and purple salvia, produce beautiful, vibrant blooms. Just make sure to talk to your garden center specialist so you plant accordingly for your shady and sunny spots.

Kids can now wear designer clothes straight out of a fairy tale

Your kids, nephews or nieces are about to get an early taste of high fashion, with the launch of Maleficent by Stella McCartney Kids. Prices start at $75, with 10 percent of sales going to the charity SOS Children's villages. Now available at www.stellamccartney.com.

LIMIT SOCIAL MEDIA USE BY USING IT MORE

Split

Platforms: iOS and Android
Price: Free

Last month the film "Transcendence" depicted a truly monstrous dystopia: a near-future where people "unplugged" from technology. No one saw it, suggesting that the idea of not being on Instagram is too frightening for most to consider. But for some, the anxiety of being permanently connected is real. Some of you drop off Facebook or Twitter to take "social media breaks" — anything to get away from the constant din of the online world, where you can broadcast your every thought and move, chucking your fears of "Big Brother" as you willingly report on yourself.

If, however, you want to do something less rash than calling it quits, Split is your app. It's an "antisocial" program that lets you decrease your social media activity in moderation. It does this by targeting your, shall we say, superfluous friends — the ones you became online "buddies" with out of some twisted sense of social pressure or decency.

Perhaps you have annoying friends or people with whom you have beef (but are still connected to via Facebook, Twitter or Instagram, evidently). Split allows you to mark the unwelcome parties as ones to "avoid." The app will let you scan locations to see where they've advertised themselves as being, or even places they frequent. It even gives you, if you find yourself in close proximity, escape routes. This can work both ways: You can take a social media break by briefly dropping off the grid.

Split is a great way to avoid people you don't want to see.
PROVIDED

Then again, you could look at an anti-social-media app such as Split as its own form of micro-managing. In trying to lessen technology's hold, it takes it to another level. Horrible run-ins are horrible, but they are also one of the few genuine social surprises we have left in life. If we now can know how best to avoid an old flame, then … sorry, never mind. Maybe technology isn't so bad after all.

Brush DJ

Platforms: iOS and Android
Price: Free

You know how bored you get when you're spending an entire two minutes — that's 120 seconds! — brushing your teeth, as advised by the American Dental Association? Or maybe you don't, because that's not a very long time. But if you do, Brush DJ is here to help you. It allows you to play music while you clean your pearly whites, pulling from your phone's MP3 player. It could be a bit awkward when the only song you have is Neil Young's "Ambulance Blues," but the more ambitious can also share favorite brushing songs with other users via social media.

Use tunes while you brush your teeth with Brush DJ.

You can't stop your hair from losing its color, but you can delay the process. / CREATAS

Gray matter

Don't panic. You can take steps to help stop your hair from turning white.

Eventually, most of us will develop canities — the technical term for going gray. The bad news is that there's no proven way to reverse the condition. The good news, as most of us probably know, is that it isn't life- or even health-threatening — just a little demoralizing. Canities can affect 20-somethings, but it usually kicks in around middle age. Some people retain most of their hair's color into their 60s. Technically, hair doesn't turn gray; it turns white. But as it does, it reflects nearby coloring and appears gray.

"Each of the 100,000 to 150,000 hairs on our scalp are on independent growth cycles," says Dr. Robert Dorin, a family practice doctor and member of The International Society of Hair Restoration Surgery. "As our hair shafts elongate, special cells called melanocytes produce hair pigment and deposit it in the hair cells. As we age, the specialized cells that constantly resupply new melanocytes, called melanocyte stem cells, begin to slow down."

So, with aging, or interruption in melanocyte production due to illness, the amount of pigment distributed through the hair becomes more sparse. The rate of natural hair color change is mostly due to genetics, says Dorin, but maintaining good health plays a huge part, too.

"Hormone levels, stress, lifestyle, environmental pollutants and toxins can affect hair pigment production," he adds. Even natural body chemicals affect it. "Recently in a study done in Europe, scientists found that a buildup of hydrogen peroxide from the hair cells' biological process contributed to graying hair."

Tips

Keep your color

As yet, there's no proof that graying can be reversed, but slowing down the process is possible, says Dorin. His tips for maintaining natural hair color sound familiar: They are the same as maintaining general good health.

1 Stop smoking and limit alcohol intake "These inhibit your body's ability to fight the processes of aging and create free radicals that destroy cellular function."

2 Exercise "Consistent, moderate exercise helps your body's defense system to maximize its ability to slow aging and to prevent loss of cellular function."

3 Eat a well-balanced diet "Eat a 'rainbow' of fruits and vegetables to ensure that you consume plant-derived antioxidants. Drink green tea. Juice at home, especially with organically grown veggies."

What you don't know (but should!) about skin cancer

Health. Protect yourself this summer with these sun safety tips.

Have fun in the sun, but always remember to reapply sunscreen. / DIGITAL VISION

You know to apply — and reapply — sunscreen. You know to buy the broad-spectrum kind. You know that you should get weird-looking moles checked out. But what you don't know about sun protection could mean the difference between a summer on the beach and one on the operating table. We asked derms to fill us in on the beyond-basic skin rules you need to know for protecting yourself this summer.

1 You need sunscreen every. single. day. Yes, even when it's cloudy, raining, sleeting — you get the idea. The sun beams out UVA and UVB rays; the latter are the sun's most damaging during the summer months, says Dr. Neal Shultz, a New York City dermatologist. Use sunscreen as the first layer of products you apply to your face each morning.

Free screening

The Skin Cancer Foundation is providing free full-body screenings by dermatologists at Rite Aid locations throughout the country. The Road to Healthy Skin Tour stops in Philadelphia on June 3 from 9 a.m. to noon at 9920 Bustleton Ave. You can also learn how to do monthly checks at home and get free sun-protection product samples. For more information, visit www.SkinCancer.org/tour.

2 You're sweating off sunscreen more than you think. You definitely want to reapply after you go for a dip and after you get sweaty. But even if you're just lounging around, you still need to reapply it every two to three hours because perspiration will invisibly wash away the sunscreen, says Shultz.

3 You don't really need SPF 100. You might think you're doing your skin some extra good, but really, even a 15 provides almost 90 percent protection. "Whether the SPF is 15, 30 or 100, it needs to reapplied with the same frequency," Shultz says.

4 Boozing? You're more likely to burn. When you're drinking, your skin is way more vulnerable to the sun. That's because alcohol dilates your blood vessels, meaning there's more red in your skin, and "the pinker the skin, the closer the blood cells are to the surface — and therefore, they absorb more damaging UV rays," Shultz says.

5 You can get skin cancer in spots that aren't exposed to the sun. Even if you're not sunbathing in the nude, you can still get skin cancer in your groin and anus. Other weird places you can get it? Behind your eye and in your mucus membranes, like inside your nose and mouth. Get these checked out at your annual exams, recommends Dr. Sapna Patel, assistant professor of melanoma medical oncology at the University of Texas MD Anderson Cancer Center.

6 If it bleeds, it leads. A mole that gets bloody with minimal trauma is something to watch out for, says Dr. Patel. "Most benign things shouldn't have a blood vessel in them — it's malignant things that are digging in and growing roots."

A spray-on won't cut it

"Spray-on sunscreens make it real easy to miss big areas of your body, or small areas [that] you don't know you've missed," says Dr. Shultz.

A fatal physics problem

Re: 'Salmoning is safer for cyclists' (Metro, May 16-18) Who are all the bikers who choose to ride against traffic? As a driver and as a bicyclist, I am so disturbed by the fact that people choose to "always ride bikes against traffic." It's so dangerous for both parties: With a bike going 10 miles per hour and a vehicle going 30-40 miles per hour heading toward one another, that doesn't leave time to prevent a collision.

MIKE DISCOLO, VIA EMAIL

Have these people saying they prefer to ride a bike against the traffic ever heard of a great invention called a rearview mirror? They make them for bicycles, too.

SUZANNE PALAU, VIA EMAIL

IRS said it was wrong

Re: 'IRS follows the law' (Metro, May 20) The IRS admitted it improperly targeted conservative groups for additional scrutiny and apologized for it. During the time period in question, 104 conservative groups underwent additional scrutiny versus seven progressive groups. The intrusiveness was far greater for the conservative groups than for the progressive groups.

New Stadium, new site for game

The NFL announced it will play the 2018 Super Bowl in Minneapolis, rewarding the Vikings for building a new stadium. The site in Minnesota beat out New Orleans and Indianapolis for the right to host the biggest game in the world. Next year's game will be in Glendale, Arizona, before Super Bowl 50 in Santa Clara in 2016 and 51 in Houston in 2017.

Cavaliers defy odds, awarded No. 1 pick

NBA. The Sixers took the third pick in the draft after a disappointing NBA draft lottery.

The Cleveland Cavaliers had just a 1.7 percent chance of earning the first overall pick in the NBA draft in June.

But for some reason the basketball gods awarded the Cavs, relegating the Sixers to the No. 3 overall pick while the Milwaukee Bucks will select at No. 2.

Philadelphia expected to have at least a top-two pick, with nearly a 20 percent chance of landing No. 1, but the pingpong balls went the other way.

Even with their disappointing draw, the Sixers also have the No 10 pick, as well as five picks in the second round.

Superstitions

Sixers bring luck to Lottery

On Tuesday night the Sixers found out their fate at the 2014 NBA draft lottery and the superstitious can rest easy knowing that the team put forth their best efforts at landing the top pick.

The Sixers held a Lucky Charm Contest to find the most interesting piece of fan memorabilia for Julius Erving to bring with him on lottery night. The winning fan supplied "Dr. J" with two pieces of broken backboard from a famous 1979 Darryl Dawkins dunk which rattled the Spectrum and brought fans to their feet.

Lucky charms

The Sixers weren't the first team to round up something from the history books to accompany them on lottery night. Here are three obscure lucky charms teams have brought.

- 1985: The Knicks had a lucky horseshoe and won the first pick.
- 2005: The Bucks got No. 1 thanks to a lucky fishing lure.
- 2009: The Clippers won thanks to a custom Clippers-lined suit jacket.

MLS. Union, manager Hackworth can't solve inconsistent play

Danny Cruz and the other Philadelphia Union footballers support John Hackworth as their manager going forward. / GETTY IMAGES

Union players rallied together this past week and saved manager John Hackworth's job — for now.

They came away with a 2-1 victory over defending champion Sporting KC (5-2-4) last Wednesday on the road while playing without starters Maurice Edu and Brian Carroll.

Danny Cruz found the back of the net to start the second half and players immediately swarmed Hackworth with a strong embrace to show how much he means to this team and organization.

"We're behind him and he knows we are behind him," Cruz said of his manager postgame. "We just wanted to show to the media and to the fans that tonight was big for not just us, but for [Hackworth] and I think you could see the fight in everybody tonight for that big reason."

The feeling of jubilation was short lived, however, as the Union (2-6-5) were dismantled on Saturday, falling 5-3 at home to the New England Revolution.

The week still wound up a positive one for the Union, who'd been struggling offensively for the past month.

The team netted five goals in the past two matches, when they were only able to muster two in the previous five.

Playing three matches in seven days will wear on any team, especially facing a team as good as the Revolution (6-3-2).

"We are unhappy and everyone is frustrated, but three games in seven days is extremely tough, bodies are tired," said Cruz. "That's not an excuse, it's just the reality."

The Union head to Los Angeles on Sunday to face the Galaxy (2-3-3). The game will air at 8 p.m. on Comcast SportsNet.

Union to host English Premier League's Crystal Palace

On Monday, the Union announced they'll be facing English Premier League's Crystal Palace in a friendly match on July 25 at home at PPL Park.

"We are looking forward to hosting a great team and organization this summer," said Union CEO Nick Sakiewicz. "Crystal Palace will be our fifth English Premier League team to play the Philadelphia Union, and we are delighted we can bring them to PPL Park. I know the fans will see an interesting and exciting international exhibition."

Palace finished the 2013-2014 campaign with a 13-6-19 record and an 11th-place finish.

MLB power rankings | by Ryan Hannable

No. 1

Athletics (28-16)

Oakland is the hottest team in baseball at the moment, simply dominating its competition. In its weekend sweep of the Indians, the A's outscored Cleveland, 30-6, and didn't hit a single homer along the way. They have won nine of 10 and will face the Rays and Blue Jays on the road this week.

No. 2

Tigers (27-13)

Detroit has won seven of its last 10 games, including a sweep of the Red Sox over the weekend at Fenway Park.

No. 3

Giants (28-17)

The Giants' pitching has improved of late as their 3.21 team ERA is third in the NL. They will host the second-place Rockies for three games this week.

No. 4

Brewers (27-18)

Despite losing three in a row, the Brewers remain one of the top teams in the National League, although their offense has gone cold of late.

No. 5

Rockies (25-20)

The Rockies slipped a bit this week, losing three of four, but still are right behind the Giants in the NL West.

No. 6

Braves (29-19)

Atlanta is averaging just 3.35 runs per game, which is second to last in the NL, not something you'd expect from a team leading their division.

No. 7

Angels (24-20)

As the weather has heated up, so have the Angels as they have now won seven of their last 10 games and are now in second place in the AL West.

No. 8

Yankees (23-20)

Though they've gone .500 in their last 10 games, the Yankees have regained the top spot in the American League East.

No. 9

Cardinals (23-21)

It appears the defending NL champs have gotten themselves back on track, winning four of their last five games despite a sluggish offense.

No. 10

Marlins (23-22)

The downward trend for Miami has continued as the Marlins learned they would be without ace Jose Fernandez for the entire season.

No. 11

Blue Jays (23-22)

The Blue Jays still remain the only team in the AL East with a positive run differential as they continue to hang around.

No. 12

Dodgers (23-22)

Despite being in the top 10 in a number of offensive categories, the Dodgers have struggled on the mound with a team ERA of 3.68.

No. 13

Nationals (23-21)

The Nationals have done their best to overcome injuries to open the season, thanks in large part to their pitching, ranked fourth in the NL.

No. 14

Orioles (22-20)

Even with a poor offense, Baltimore is just a half game behind the Yankees for first in a below-average AL East.

No. 15

Royals (22-22)

Kansas City has the talent to potentially contend for a wild card spot, but they haven't been able to get the hitting yet this season.

No. 16

Mariners (21-22)

After two straight dominant weeks, the Mariners have come back to Earth, losing four straight and five of six last week.
